Becki Newton made sure her Elsie Katz Couture gown (above) was absolutely fashion-emergency-proof for the SAG Awards on Jan. 27. Why? Because she had a major mishap at the 2007 Primetime Emmy Awards with her J. Mendel dress (right). "The little thing that you pull to unzip and zip came off," she tells Life & Style. Justin gets an eyeful of Drew

Drew Barrymore gave people — including boyfriend Justin Long — something to talk about when she seemingly went braless to the LA premiere of Vince Vaughn's Wild West Comedy Show on Jan. 28. "I don't even wear a bra," Drew admitted in 2003. "I'm pretty free: I posed in Playboy, and I flashed them on Letterman." Old habits die hard!

She's done it before!

Drew was without support at the 2006 Golden Globes.

Rebecca: "I'm a little bit of a lip-balm slut"

It doesn't take much to get Ugly Betty's Rebecca Romijn to pucker up. She tells Life & Style, "I'll use any old lip balm — Bonne Bell Lip Smacker in Dr Pepper."

Pete and Ash sync their styles

Ashlee Simpson really loves boyfriend Pete Wentz's sporty fashion sense — so much that she wore Creative Recreation sneaks to match his Nike kicks at a pre–Super Bowl party in Scottsdale, Ariz., on Jan. 30. "Ashlee's a bit of a tomboy," Pete says. "Most of the time we're hanging out, she's wearing my clothes."

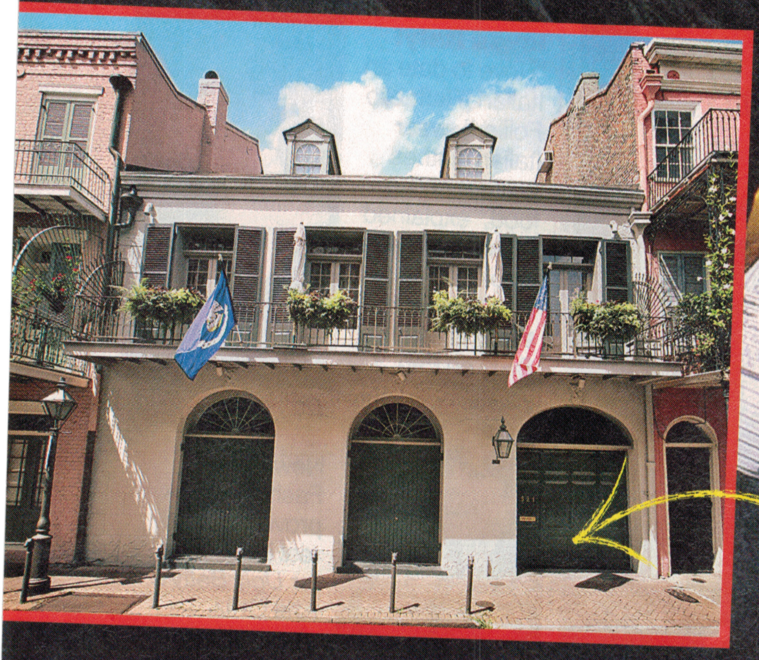
NEW

"Angelina's scared for Shiloh's safety," says an insider. "She and Brad aren't taking this lightly."



Angelina and Brad's house in New Orleans is exposed to the street, so someone could have easily gotten close enough to leave a note.

THREAT AGAINST SHILOH

Angelina Jolie and Brad Pitt amp up security after a chilling note targeting their daughter is discovered at one of their homes

EXTRA SECURITY!

"An armed security service tours the house in Los Feliz 24-7, and unmarked FBI cars constantly check on the gated grounds," says an insider close to Brad and Angie's security team.

There was activity at the house on Jan. 24.

It's a sad reality, but celebrities are used to finding the occasional threatening letter mixed in with their fan mail. But the ominous note Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie received in early January hit much closer to home — literally.

"Someone got to their doorstep and left a threat against Shiloh," an insider close to the couple reveals exclusively to Life & Style. "The person included a photo of Shiloh and a note that read, 'We got this close already.'"

For security reasons, the insider couldn't specify whether the letter was left at Brad and Angelina's Los Feliz, Calif., estate or at their house in New Orleans. But the couple were terrified — and now more than ever, they've made security a top priority.

"They're freaked out," says the insider. "Shiloh has somebody protecting her 24-7, and Brad and Angie are trying to avoid taking her out of the house." (Indeed, the last time 21-month-old Shiloh was photographed in public was on Jan. 4.)

Keeping Shiloh safe

The latest threat came less than two months after shots were fired outside Brad and Angelina's Los Feliz house on Nov. 27. A camper van used by Brad and Angelina's security team was hit. So Brad, 44, and Angelina, 32, aren't taking any chances when it comes to Shiloh and their other children, Maddox, 6, Pax, 4, and Zahara, 3.

Though the couple's rep denies any changes in security, the house "is like a fortress now," says another insider. "Infrared cameras cover every square inch of the grounds."

Also, motion-tracking cameras with ultrasensitive detectors to alert security to a possible intruder have been placed on the property. The house now also contains a state-of-

"Anytime anyone asks me about my children, I'm happy," says Angelina.

the-art security control room, manned by four additional staff members who monitor activity. Notes the insider, "Brad and Angie are by far the most security-conscious celebrities in the world."

Keeping Angie safe, too

They're even more cautious these days now that Angelina's pregnant again. "Brad wants to make sure she has a stress-free pregnancy," says a friend of the actor. "He wants her to relax and leave the worrying to him. He just wants Angelina to concentrate on delivering healthy babies."

Easier said than done. Angelina, who insiders say is having twins, is concerned. "The idea that she must constantly look over her shoulder and worry about her kids when they're out is taking its toll," says the insider. "She's a brave person, but this is scary, and she's feeling vulnerable."

And that could cause problems, says Dr. Theodore N. Hariton, an Arizona-based ob-gyn who doesn't treat the star. "Stress can have negative effects," he says. "If a woman is stressed, she might do things like not eat right or not get enough sleep, which is unhealthy anytime but especially during a pregnancy."

A small price to pay

Luckily, money is no object when it comes to protecting Shiloh. "The budget isn't much different from the amount necessary to protect a president or a prime minister," says the second insider. "What cost can you put on your children's lives?"

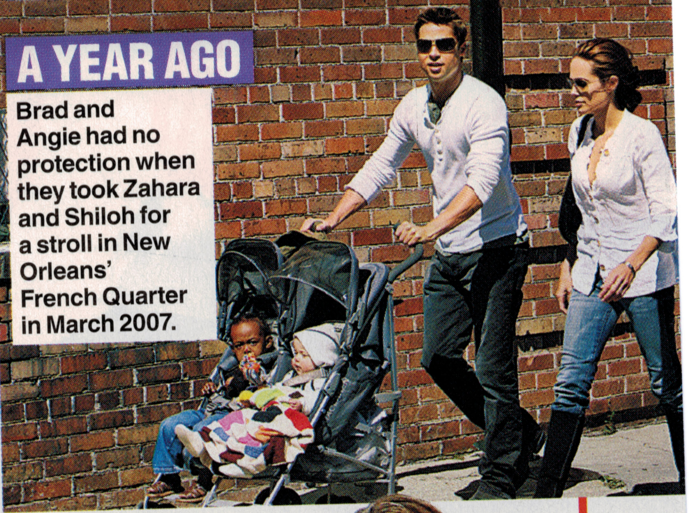
The new control room cost $240,000, the second insider says, while the extra staff is an additional $107,000 a month. In 2008 alone, the insider says Brad and Angelina's security bill could hit a staggering $5 million.

But that's a small amount to ensure that Shiloh and the other children remain safe. "Brad and Angie will do whatever it takes to protect them," notes the first insider. "There have been frequent threats against their kids — but this time someone just got too close."

Angie talks Shiloh — and the baby bump!

Angelina spoke openly at the Santa Barbara Film Festival about her love for her children. "I like being a mom," she said on Feb. 2 after winning Performance of the Year for her role in A Mighty Heart. "That's my big passion." She even talked baby bump — albeit a fake one. (Reporters were told not to bring up her pregnancy.) When asked what it was like to wear a prosthetic bump in the movie, Angelina said, "It's great; you can take it off at night! It was three months after [Shiloh] had been born, so it was bizarre to be right back into it. There's something about that for a woman, to physically have that belly, that just makes you feel [maternal]. I'd just had a child, and I thought about what a wonderful experience that was."

THEY ARE MORE PROTECTED THAN EVER!



A YEAR AGO

Brad and Angie had no protection when they took Zahara and Shiloh for a stroll in New Orleans' French Quarter in March 2007.

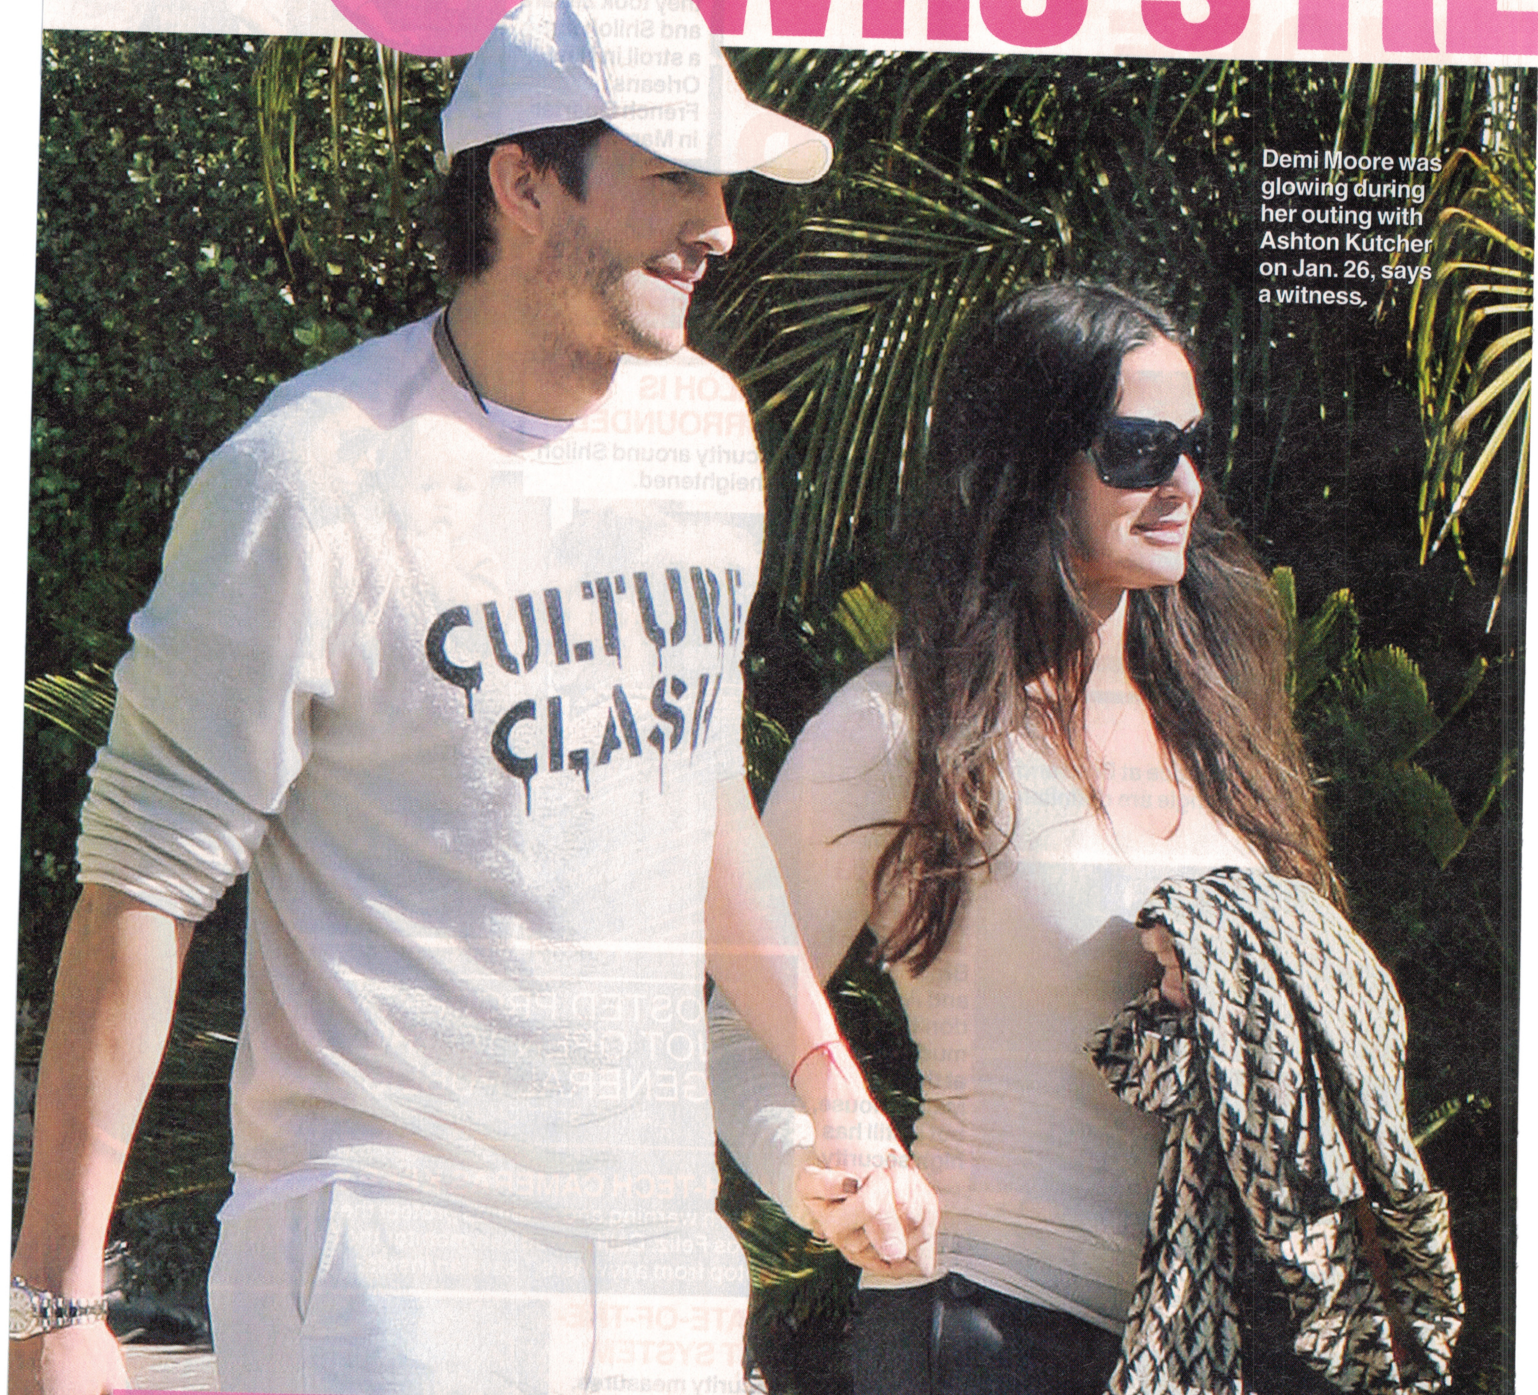
Who's RE



Demi Moore was glowing during her outing with Ashton Kutcher on Jan. 26, says a witness.

Demi covers up with a coat

Could Ashton Kutcher Jr. be on the way? It looked like it on Jan. 26, when Demi Moore, 45, and Ashton, 30, attended a private kabbalah brunch in Beverly Hills.

Demi's bump was so noticeable, says an insider, "a woman in the group patted Demi's stomach and said, 'Do you know what it is?' She seemed to be asking if Demi knew whether it was a boy or a girl. Demi just shook her head and smiled." And outside, notes a witness, "Demi covered her belly with her coat."

Still, a friend of the couple, who have been trying to have a baby for years, says pregnancy is unlikely. "They're focusing on adoption or surrogacy instead," says the friend.

ALLY pregnant?

Are these stars expecting — or just putting on some pounds?

Kate's looking pretty puffy

Kate Hudson's recent string of loose-fitting outfits and apparent baby bulge caused speculation that Ryder, 4, could soon have a sibling. Not so, says a rep for the single mom, 28. "She hasn't been seeing anyone special and hasn't talked about baby plans," says an insider. "Plus, she's about to start two projects — she has no time for a pregnancy."

Katie sports billowy clothes

"She wanted a sibling for Suri this year," says a friend about a possible pregnancy paunch on Katie Holmes, 29. A rep denies she's pregnant. "She used to love to talk about the prospect of a new baby," says the friend, "but now she veers away from the topic."

Minnie eats for two

Is it those cupcakes or could this be a budding baby belly on Minnie Driver? "Minnie is about three months pregnant, and she's thrilled," a friend of Minnie's tells Life & Style. That still leaves one mystery: Who's the daddy? The friend says Minnie, 38, is keeping that private for now.

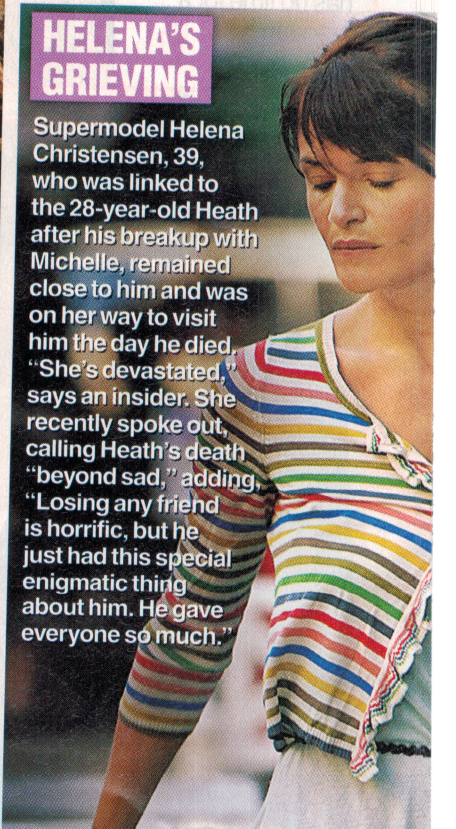
Michelle says she clings to Heath's "presence inside [Matilda] that reveals itself every day."

MICHELLE'S HEARTBROKEN

Even after splitting with Heath in September, Michelle Williams, 27, remained close to her former fiancé. "My heart's broken," Michelle said in a Feb. 1 statement, in which she also called the couple's 2-year-old daughter, Matilda, "the spitting image" of Heath. "His family and I watch Matilda as she whispers to trees, hugs animals and takes steps two at a time, and we know that Heath's with us still," Michelle said. Adds an insider, "Every time Michelle looks at Matilda, she's reminded of all the things she loved about Heath."



HELENA'S GRIEVING

Supermodel Helena Christensen, 39, who was linked to the 28-year-old Heath after his breakup with Michelle, remained close to him and was on her way to visit him the day he died. "She's devastated," says an insider. She recently spoke out, calling Heath's death "beyond sad," adding, "Losing any friend is horrific, but he just had this special enigmatic thing about him. He gave everyone so much."

NAOMI'S BATTLING DEPRESSION

LINDSAY'S PARTYING

Friends fear that Lindsay Lohan, 21, who reportedly had a brief fling with Heath last fall, may be resorting to old habits to numb her pain over his passing. "I think Heath's death was a trigger for her, and now she's a mess — going out, partying," says a friend of the starlet. "Lindsay's really torn up about Heath. She felt they had a deep connection." The actors had been calling and texting each other since hooking up in New York last Thanksgiving, says an insider, who adds, "Lindsay was crazy about him. She's mourning what might've been between them."

MARY-KATE'S IN HIDING

After reportedly hitting bars in the days after Heath's death, Mary-Kate Olsen, 21, has been keeping a low profile, avoiding questions about the actor she was secretly dating, says a friend. Though they weren't serious ("There were no strings, no commitments," says the friend), MK's still reeling. "She just doesn't understand how it could've happened," says the friend.

Hollywood remembers Heath

Katie Holmes (once Michelle Williams' co-star on Dawson's Creek), hubby Tom Cruise, Lindsay Lohan, Orlando Bloom and Sean Penn were, according to reports, among the stars who gathered for a memorial service held in Hollywood on Feb. 2. Days earlier, relatives and close friends of Heath's held a smaller service in LA.

Inside the psychiatric unit of UCLA Medical Center, where Britney Spears has been staying in a padded room since Jan. 31, the singer is eerily calm. "Britney's been sleeping mostly," says a Spears family insider. "She's taken her meds, and there's been no acting out, nothing disturbing, just some crying."

But Britney, who hasn't seen her sons since Jan. 3, is obsessed with Jayden James, 1, and Sean Preston, 2, according to the insider: "She's been asking, 'If I stay here the whole time, I get to see my kids again, right?'"

That remains to be seen. But while Brit's been subdued, a battle has been raging outside. In fact, while Britney's hospitalization at 1:30 a.m. on Jan. 31 seemed like a replay of her previous breakdown — when she locked herself in a bedroom with Jayden on Jan. 3 and was rushed to the hospital — the circumstances were very different. A Britney insider reveals that the move to get her into the hospital under a 72-hour hold — later extended to a 14-day forced stay — was the result of a carefully planned plot by the singer's parents, Jamie and Lynne Spears, to get her away from the man they view as a serious threat to her safety: her manager and friend Sam Lutfi.

"They'd been planning a snatch-and-grab-style intervention for some time now," the Britney insider says. "They believe Sam is selling her out, controlling her and taking her down a dark path."

While those accusations may sound far-fetched, Ken Dungey, who calls himself a Britney's parents are trying to help their daughter, but for now they're allowed to visit the singer in the Stewart and Lynda Resnick Neuropsychiatric Hospital at UCLA for only one hour a day. But Brit's never alone — she's supervised by nurses and security at all times, even while bathing. She's also being medicated under a doctor's supervision, which may explain why she's finally able to sleep.

friend of Sam's, told MTV News that Sam boasts he "controls 99 percent of Britney's life."

Her parents take action

On Jan. 27, Lynne arrived in LA — and when she saw Britney, 26, she was stunned by how her daughter's condition had deteriorated. "Lynne and Jamie were afraid her body was shutting down," says the Spears family insider. "She hadn't been eating for almost a week, and she couldn't sleep even though she was taking sleeping pills. And she'd stopped taking her medications because she thought they weren't working. They had to act immediately."

On Jan. 29, the family held two secret meetings with a team of lawyers to fine-tune their strategy, the family insider says. After consulting with Britney's new psychiatrist, Dr. Deborah Nadel, they put their plan into motion: Dr. Nadel arrived at Britney's house for what the singer believed was a therapy session. Instead, the family insider says, "the doctor explained to her, 'Honey, after 60 hours without sleep you can start to hallucinate. If you're driving, you're a danger to others. You've got to go to the hospital for help." After Britney agreed, Dr. Nadel called for the ambulance and a police escort.

While the family insider says Britney's parents are suspicious of the pop star's photographer boyfriend, Adnan Ghalib, they view Sam as a greater danger. "Lynne drove to the hospital with Adnan," says the family insider, "to send a message to Sam that he's not calling the shots."

Fighting in court

That message only got louder. First Sam was barred from the hospital, and on Feb. 1, Jamie went to LA court with Lynne by his side and was granted conservatorship over his daughter until the next hearing, scheduled for Feb. 14. It allows him to restrict Britney's visitors, control her assets and hire security guards to protect her. "He was thrilled," says the family insider.

Jamie's attorneys also had a restraining order issued against Sam, which bans him from having contact with Britney — in person or even by phone or e-mail. And Britney's parents aren't stopping there. "They want to look into Sam for mishandling Brit's disease," the Britney insider says. "Sam was in charge of her medicines, her bills, everything. They believe he took advantage of her and kept her out of it."

That kind of allegation is difficult to prove, but the insider says Brit's parents want to have Sam looked at regarding a theft at Britney's house after she went to the hospital. "Jamie and Lynne think it's him," the insider says. "They suspect he knew it was all coming to an end and tried to get whatever he could." The insider also claims the IRS is auditing Britney in an attempt to find out if it needs to collect more taxes from her.

While Britney's parents won the first rounds in the courts, Sam struck back through the media. In an interview with Ryan Seacrest, the American Idol host reported on his radio show, "[Sam] said, and I quote, 'Her parents are incapable of telling the truth…. They're more concerned about money and their own image than about Britney's condition.'"

Jamie's denied any interest in Brit's money, telling other family members he could have accepted a salary to act as conservator but turned it down. "He and Lynne are only looking to protect Britney from others," says the insider. "They're ready to win this fight."

Indeed, Britney appears to be making progress at UCLA Medical Center, and her parents won't let her slip away again, says the Britney insider. "She's having these bipolar episodes right in public but hasn't gotten help because Sam has blocked her," the insider says. "Now Sam is losing his grip on Britney."

And when Britney's released from the hospital, her parents hope she'll be healthy enough to realize how much they love her. "Britney's family is basically going to open their arms with no strings attached and say, 'Come with us,'" says the insider. "This is the last real chance to save her."

Super Bowl XLII proved to be a star-studded game

Quarterbacks Tom Brady and Eli Manning weren't the only high-profile celebs in Glendale, Ariz., for the big game on Feb. 3. This year, A-listers at University of Phoenix Stadium walked the first-ever Super Bowl red carpet, where they were greeted by Ryan Seacrest! The famous faces watched the New York Giants shock the previously unbeaten New England Patriots, 17-14.

The Giants' win was the second-most-watched show in TV history, with 97.5 million fans on the edge of their seats.

Go Big Blue! Pam Anderson joined the Giants' cheering squad after her team's fourth-quarter game-deciding touchdown.

Ashlee Simpson held her breath as Pete Wentz played in the Jan. 31 DirecTV Celebrity Beach Bowl. "Anytime it looked like he might get hurt, she seemed like she was going to cry," says a witness.

TAKES THE FIELD

Patriots fan Kate Hudson made a stylish showing on the field.

Spotted: Gossip Girl's Blake Lively cuddling her pup between plays at the DirecTV celeb scrimmage.

Kellie Pickler took her Tonight Show reporting gig, um, sort of seriously, kicking off media-day festivities on Jan. 29.

New Jersey native Jason Biggs put on his game face, prepping for a Giants win.

Spotted at the big event

● Stacy Keibler and her boyfriend, Geoff Stults, didn't use their fame to cut the line at the crowded Mondrian Scottsdale hotel, where they waited at the bar before dining.

● Adrian Grenier was without his usual female entourage at the Feb. 1 Maxim party. But the sexy men of Nip/Tuck stole all the attention!

● 50 Cent showed his skills, beating Jimmy Kimmel at the Vitaminenergy-sponsored Celebrity Naked Ping-Pong Tournament.

● Ryan Seacrest and Sunset Tan star Holly Huddleston put on quite a show, kissing until 5 a.m. at the Feb. 1 Tao/944 House of Hennessy event.

DID THEY EVEN KNOW THERE WAS A GAME?

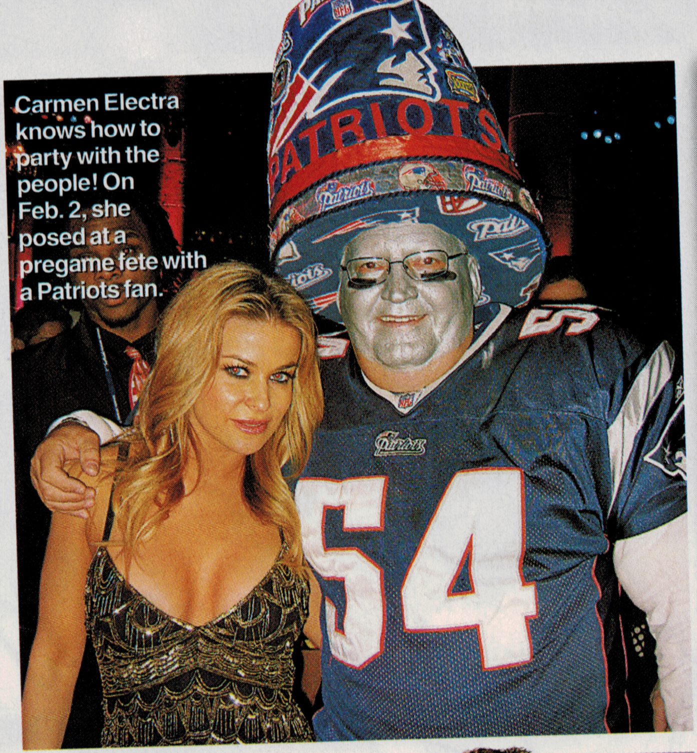
It was as good an excuse as any for celebrities to party!

Forget the actual game. For many of the A-listers in Arizona, it was more about the big bashes. Just ask Kim Kardashian! "I don't even know the team names," she admitted to Life & Style at a Jan. 31 pre–Super Bowl event. So who was she rooting for? "Whichever team Tom Brady plays for — the Tom Brady team." Guess she wasn't too upset when the Patriots lost to the Giants.

Grey's Anatomy castmates Kate Walsh and Katherine Heigl made a sexy duo at the Feb. 2 Victoria's Secret What Is Sexy soiree at the Taste Ultra Lounge.

It was a roller-coaster night for Paris, who went from a high onstage to a moment of tears.

Paris Hilton refused to let 50 Cent outshine her at the Feb. 1 Pontiac G8 party. When he didn't let her join him onstage, Paris put on a private show, onlookers say.



Carmen Electra knows how to party with the people! On Feb. 2, she posed at a pregame fete with a Patriots fan.

Spencer Pratt played director as he kicked it old school at the Feb. 1 Maxim magazine–sponsored opening of the Stone Rose Lounge, Scottsdale. On the boom box? Heidi Montag's single "Higher."

Kim Kardashian and sisters Khloe and Kourtney shook their booties at the Trump Vodka VIP Lounge at 944 magazine's Super Village on Feb. 1.

LAUREN'S WILD NIGHT

The booze was flowing as Lauren Conrad celebrated her 22nd birthday at S Bar in LA on Jan. 30. The Hills star partied with gal pals Audrina Patridge, Lauren "Lo" Bosworth and Whitney Port — but did she have one too many watermelon-cucumber mojitos? "She had a lot to drink," says a witness. A tipsy Lauren even needed some assistance leaving the club, nearly spilling out of her dress when getting into her car, adds the witness. Luckily, Lo came to her rescue and prevented a wardrobe malfunction!

Still, those close to Lauren say the star was just having a good time — and you're only 22 once. "She's not a lush," insists a friend. "She's a hardworking and talented girl."

Happy birthday, Lauren!

Lauren (here with Lo on Jan. 30) is "just doing what you're supposed to do at 22," says an insider.

"Lauren likes to party hard," says a bartender at Les Deux.

Jessica and Tony, here on Feb. 4, went to a Super Bowl party together, a witness says. Next up? The Pro Bowl in Hawaii!

Jess to cheer Tony on again!

Jessica Simpson will have a chance to wear her infamous pink Tony Romo jersey at least one more time. Despite being labeled a jinx to the star quarterback after she sat in the stands at Texas Stadium on Dec. 16 for a game Tony's Dallas Cowboys lost to the Philadelphia Eagles, the 27-year-old was set to cheer on her man when he hits the field for the NFL Pro Bowl game on Feb. 10 in Honolulu. She's even patched things up with Tony's teammate Terrell Owens, who had said Jessica wasn't a fan favorite in the Dallas locker room after the Eagles loss. Terrell now tells Life & Style, "She's my homey. The whole thing got blown way out of proportion." What's his take on the couple now? "They seem happy. He's taking good care of her — and who wouldn't?"

Katharine says 'I do!'

Actress-singer Katharine McPhee, 23, married her boyfriend of three years, producer Nick Cokas, 42, in LA on Feb. 2. "She was glowing," says a friend, who adds that guests included Rumer Willis and Katharine's fellow American Idol alums Kellie Pickler and Mandisa. The bride added a touch of sparkle to the reception, held in LA, with favors, attendant gifts and stemware by Swarovski.

"I've never seen her so happy," says a friend. "You can tell they're in love."

Kat wore a strapless ivory Manuel Mota gown.

"Lindsay and I are just chilling," Jeremy tells Life & Style.

Lindsay's new boyfriend

Lindsay Lohan's got a new man: 25-year-old songwriter and R&B artist Jeremy Greene. "Lindsay's a great girl," Jeremy tells Life & Style exclusively. "We have a very special relationship. We have a great time together just hanging out." But could it be more serious? As the two walked into the Four Seasons hotel in NYC on Jan. 28, "sparks were flying," says an insider. "Someone yelled out, 'Lindsay, who is that guy?' And she said, 'He's my new boyfriend!'"

Nick (here with Vanessa at a celebrity golf tournament in Arizona on Feb. 2) "is just waiting to find the right ring," says an insider. "When he gets it, it's on!"

NICK'S READY TO POP THE QUESTION!

Nick Lachey is hoping the second time's the charm. The 34-year-old singer, who got divorced from Jessica Simpson in June 2006 after nearly four years of marriage, has been scoping out jewelry stores, hunting for the perfect engagement ring for girlfriend Vanessa Minnillo, 27, says an insider.

"He's looking big, in the 4- to 5-carat range," says the insider. "He knows Vanessa wants serious bling!"

Vanessa has been jokingly dropping hints that she wants a princess cut, says the insider. Still, she may be surprised by Nick's proposal. "She doesn't know just how serious he is," adds the insider. "I wouldn't be surprised if he proposes within the next two months."

No word on whether Newlyweds: Nick and Vanessa is in the works.

Gwyneth spent an hour at the Kabbalah Centre in NYC on Jan. 31, says a witness.

Gwyneth's turning to kabbalah

Gwyneth Paltrow's taking a cue from her good friend Madonna: She's attending kabbalah services, says an insider. "Gwyneth just decided it was time to experience it," says the insider, who adds that Gwyneth, 35, has had "a hard year," including surgery at Mount Sinai Medical Center in NYC on Jan. 14, as Life & Style recently reported. "Madonna's never pushed anyone into kabbalah. Gwyneth's a seeker; she's just looking into kabbalah. She's not signing over her money or drinking the Kool-Aid!"

Weight-obsessed Jessica gets pregnancy boots!

Jessica Alba, who's been very outspoken about her fears of gaining weight during her pregnancy, has discovered a new trick to avert packing on the pounds. The 26-year-old star, who's busy promoting her new film, The Eye, is wearing Earth Lodge Boots — which have negative heels (the toes are 3.7 degrees higher than the heels), so wearing them "is like walking on a treadmill," says a rep for the company. "You get a slight workout, and exercise benefits pregnant women." Jessica's stylist requested the boots from the company.

Jessica, here wearing the $159 boots, has said she looks "like a fat cow," Life & Style recently reported.

Pal speaks out on Eva's stay in rehab

Eva felt she needed "some outside professional support," says her rep.

Actress Eva Mendes, 33, is the latest celebrity to land in rehab. The star has checked herself into Utah's Cirque Lodge to "attend to some personal issues," according to her rep.

"I wish her the best," celeb stylist Phillip Bloch tells Life & Style. "We all have abuse issues — we're in the fashion and film businesses. But anybody who seeks help is on the right path — that's half the battle."

Eva has reportedly already spent several weeks at Cirque Lodge, which handles substance-abuse problems.

Heroes alum Thomas Dekker calls Hayden and Milo's romance "weird."

EX CO-STAR: HAYDEN AND MILO'S RELATIONSHIP IS 'GROSS!'

Not all of Hayden Panettiere's friends and peers are thrilled that the 18-year-old is dating her Heroes co-star Milo Ventimiglia, 30. "I think it's gross, to be perfectly honest," her former Heroes co-star Thomas Dekker, 20, tells Life & Style. "It's kind of like if I were dating a 12-year-old."

Thomas, who now stars in the Fox series The Sarah Connor Chronicles, based on The Terminator, isn't a fan of generation gaps when it comes to dating. "I'm definitely surprised they're together," he says. "For me, it would be a struggle to be with someone in such a different age range." Still, he wishes them well. "Who knows? If they're happy, I'm happy."

And by all accounts, they are happy. "Not only does Milo treat Hayden well, he's great with her entire family," says a friend of Hayden's. "They love him. Age is not an issue."

Thomas played Hayden's character's best friend in the 2006 season of Heroes.

Heidi and Spencer had even valet-parked their car.

Angelina puts the kibosh on Heidi and Spencer's lunch!

Forget Lauren Conrad — is Angelina Jolie Heidi Montag's new rival in Hollywood? The Hills star, 21, and her boyfriend, Spencer Pratt, 24, were turned away for lunch at Il Pastaio in LA on Jan. 27 because Angelina, 32, was in the house. "She was with the kids, not Brad, and requested that the restaurant close the doors until she was done eating," says an eyewitness. So when Heidi and Spencer arrived 15 minutes later and tried to get in, they were turned away by Angelina's bodyguards and management. "If I knew Angelina was inside," Spencer tells Life & Style, "I would have gone in and said hello!"

"Angelina was acting like a diva," says an eyewitness.

Jenna Jameson wants a baby

Or at least to have fun trying! "We're going to Fiji. We're gonna get naked and just run in the surf and try to have a baby," former porn star Jenna Jameson, 33, tells Life & Style about a Valentine's Day trip she's planning with her boyfriend, Ultimate Fighter Tito Ortiz, 33. Is a wedding also in the works? No, says Tito, who's currently starring on The Celebrity Apprentice: "It's too much pressure. We've been friends forever."

Jenna officially retired from the adult film world in January.

"John was pumped," says an insider.

John Mayer becomes a cruise ship singer!

John Mayer's feeling the winter blues. The 30-year-old singer headlined a four-day cruise (Feb. 1–4) to the Bahamas, called the Mayercraft Carrier. "He did it for fun," says an insider. "He took his best friends on it as well." Passengers enjoyed John's soulful tunes aboard the Carnival cruise each evening in the ship's nightclub. "It was awesome," one passenger tells Life & Style.

She started the celebration and was joined by some of the couple's closest friends. After Josh blew out the candles, he got a big kiss from his 29-year-old wife, the insider says, adding, "I want to be like that when I get married. They have a fairy-tale romance!"

Matthew and Camilla, a Brazilian model whose family moved to LA when she was little, began dating early last year.

Matthew will no doubt teach his kid to love the beach!

going to be the olest dad'

The proud papa-to-be shares his parenting plans and baby joy

He's got another six months or so before he officially becomes a father, but Matthew McConaughey, who's expecting his first child with girlfriend Camilla Alves, is already in full-on daddy mode. "We are stoked and wowed by this miracle of creation and this gift from God," Matthew wrote on his Web site after getting the good news. At the Jan. 30 premiere of his new movie, Fool's Gold, the hunky star, 38, spoke to Life & Style about his hopes for the little tyke. And while Matthew claims the couple would like the gender to be a surprise, he referred to the baby as a he. Sounds like Matthew and Camilla may have trouble keeping things secret!

Have you gotten any good parenting advice?
One thing I've heard consistently is, "Whatever plans you make, throw them out the window!"

So do you think you'll be the coolest dad ever?
Oh, I'm going to be the coolest dad. I know I will. Yeah, absolutely.

We agree! Do you have any idea what you're having yet?
No. We're not going to find out until the baby greets the day. Camilla and I want to keep the suspense as high as possible.

Speaking of Camilla, she's just glowing. How's the mom-to-be doing? Is she having any cravings?
No, Camilla is one of the coolest women — one of the coolest people — I've ever met. Now that she's pregnant, it's almost like she's even more kicked back.

What are you looking forward to about having a child? What are you most excited about?
The responsibility of being a father and shepherding a child through life until he's 18. Then you send him off on his own, and you hope he goes out there and takes everything you taught him and just does more, you know?

Everyone knows you love the beach. Are you going to teach the baby to surf as soon as you can?
We're going to be outside as much as possible. Whatever sport he picks, I hope he has rhythm. He should have some rhythm. But he might not dance like I do.

Do you feel you're ready to take on fatherhood?
I think I've got the instincts for it. I'm looking forward to the big adventure.

Any chance we'll hear wedding bells soon?
I believe in the institution of marriage, but I don't feel you have to marry. A kid just needs a mom and a dad.

Kate with son Ryder, 4.

Kate thinks he'll be a great dad!

They're a hot on-screen couple — in 2003's How to Lose a Guy in 10 Days and now in Fool's Gold — but in real life, Kate Hudson and Matthew are best pals. And she couldn't be happier for him. "He's going to be fine," Kate tells Life & Style. "And Camilla's the best." Kate giggles at the thought of the actor having a baby who doesn't share his love of surfing: "You never know, Matthew might have a kid who hates the water!"

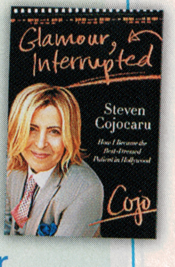
Red-carpet reporter turned author Steven "Cojo" Cojocaru shares tips on pulling off splashes of color



Q: I love the new bright clothing I've been seeing on the runways. How can I wear it without looking like a clown?

A: The biggest mistake would be to wear brights from head to toe — you'll look like a banana in heels! Keep this trend limited to one or two pieces only. It's okay to wear a yellow top with a yellow bracelet, but don't get too matchy-matchy, with bags, shoes and earrings — that's going overboard!

Q: Are bold colors office-appropriate?

A: Because vivid hues say "fun" and "cocktails" to some, it's best to rein it in a bit at the office. An eye-catching cami looks fab under a cardigan or blazer when paired with a neutral bottom. Similarly, a bright skirt can be appropriate when worn with a neutral twinset. Just make sure to choose a heavyweight fabric like a rich wool; lightweight cottons can give off a pool-party vibe. This one from Liquid ($150, Copper Penny, 843-723-2999) is a good choice.

Q: How do I know which shades will work with my skin tone?

A: Pink looks radiant on almost anyone — redheads, though, often do better with blues. One shade to be cautious of? Yellow. It can make a pale girl look washed out, but it looks amazing on redheads and those with darker complexions.

Those eyes! That nose! A new survey show

MOST COVETED NOSE

In a Hollywood Hottest Looks survey from the Beverly Hills Institute of Aesthetic & Reconstructive Surgery, co-creator Dr. Richard Fleming found that rhinoplasty ($8,000) patients want a nose like 29-year-old Katherine Heigl's. "People want her strong, well-defined, shapely nose," he says.

SOUGHT-AFTER SKIN

Heiress Paris Hilton, 26, hit the jackpot with her priceless skin. "The texture is clean and smooth," says Dr. Fleming. "It looks moist but not oily." Depending on complexion, Dr. Fleming says facials, macrodermabrasion, lasers and peels (full-face procedures that cost up to $6,500) can go a long way toward making a person's skin as pretty as Paris'.

MOST COPIED CHEEKS

Kate Bosworth, 25, is a classic beauty thanks to her candy-apple cheeks. "Round cheeks give a youthful look and accentuate the eyes," says Dr. Fleming. "They're one of the most important features in choosing beauty." No wonder people pay up to $5,000 for implants and up to $6,500 for cheek lifts to copy Kate's look.

OFTEN ASKED-FOR EYES

She's mom to a toddler, but you'd never know it looking at Katie Holmes' 29-year-old eyes. They seem well-rested. "People don't want to look tired," Dr. Fleming says. "Katie's eyes look happy — and they're perfectly almond-shaped." Others could achieve Katie's coveted look by tightening the structure of the upper and lower eyelids ($7,500).

MOST DESIRED JAW

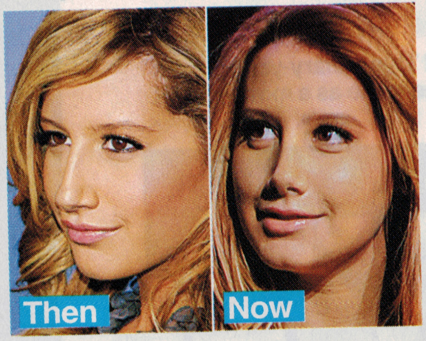
"I've always liked my neck and collarbone area," Tyra Banks, 34, has said. Apparently others admire it, too! "Tyra's jawline and chin are strong," Dr. Fleming says about the highly requested area. People even resort to $3,500 chin implants to achieve the same supermodel-worthy bone structure, says Dr. Fleming.

MOST REQUESTED POUT

It's no surprise that people aspire to have lips like 32-year-old Angelina Jolie's. "They want that fullness," explains Dr. Fleming of Angie's well-proportioned kisser. "They don't want trout lips." Injectables like $650-a-pop Restylane or fat transfers ($2,000) can help plump lips just the right amount for a person's face, he says.

EVEN CELEBS MAKE MISTAKES!

These overworked faces belong in the plastic surgery hall of shame

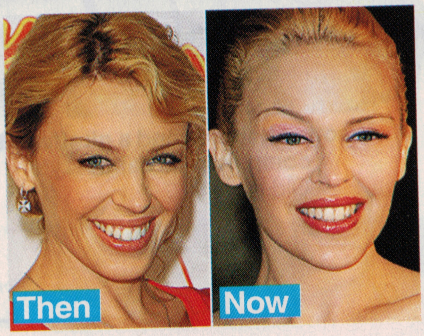


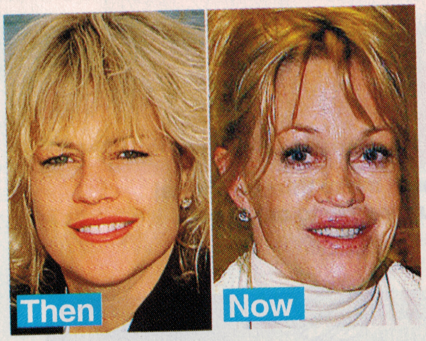
Ash's nose

Ashley Tisdale, 22, became unrecognizable to her High School Musical fans. "Some say her nose is too small for her face," says plastic surgeon Dr. Anthony Youn.

Kylie's forehead

Kylie Minogue's arched brows scream Botox! Says Dr. Youn of the 39-year-old, "Her face appears almost too smooth, like a wax figure."





Mel's pout

It looks like 50-year-old Melanie Griffith has overplumped lip implants. "She'd look more natural and glamorous without them," says Dr. Youn.

Kim's big overhaul

"She looks like a different person," Dr. Youn says of Lil' Kim, 33, who appears to have nipped her nose to excess and lightened her skin.

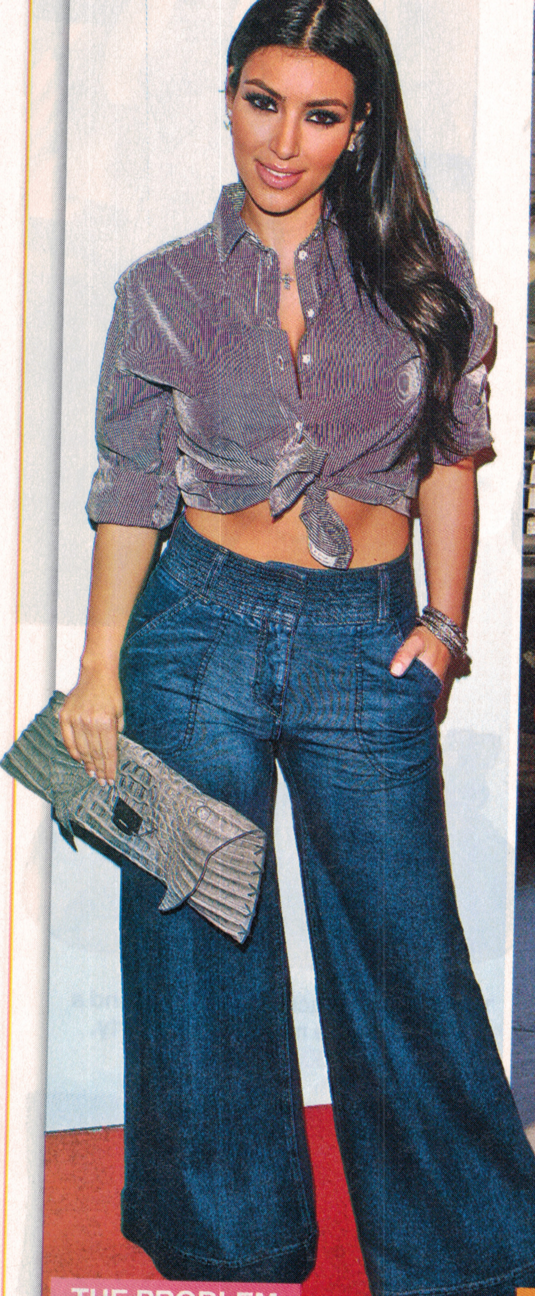
FASHION FIX

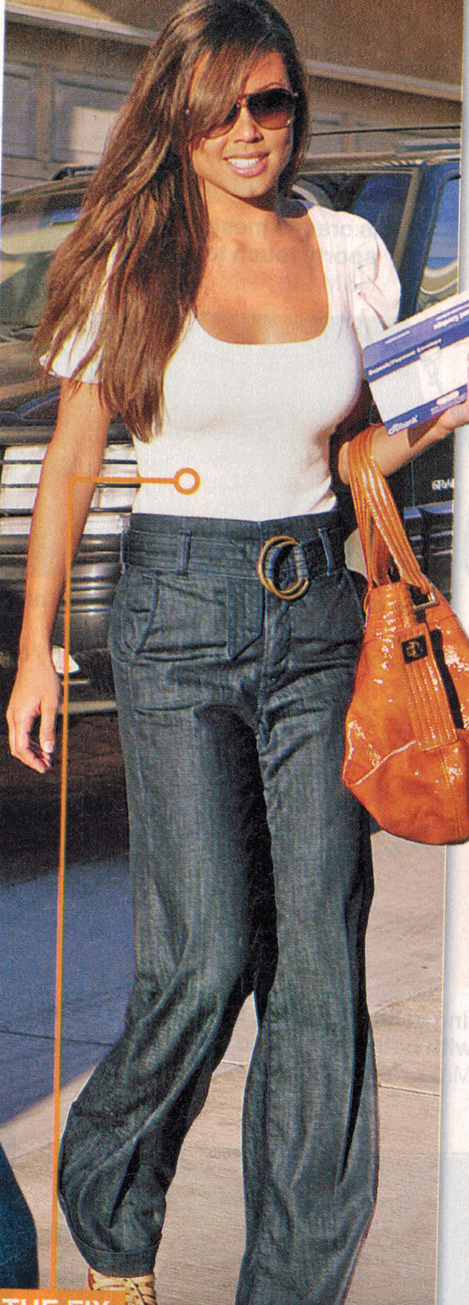
Can this outfit

Wide-leg jeans need a fitted shirt



THE PROBLEM

Kim Kardashian's disproportionate flared jeans and knotted blouse make the star look boxy. "Her top should be simple and fitted," says Kelli Delaney, designer for relaunched 1980s brand Members Only.



THE FIX

Tucking a slim-fitting T-shirt into jeans — like Vanessa Minnillo did with her Seven for All Mankind pair on Jan. 19 — creates a skinnier torso, offsetting the wide legs and creating a trimmer look, says Delaney.

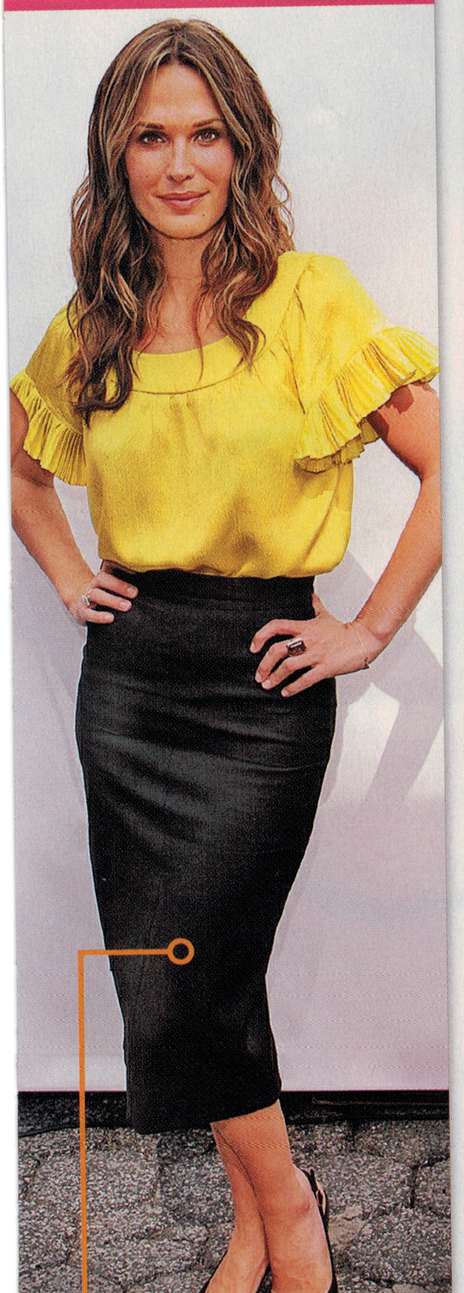
Life & Style puts three celeb looks to the test

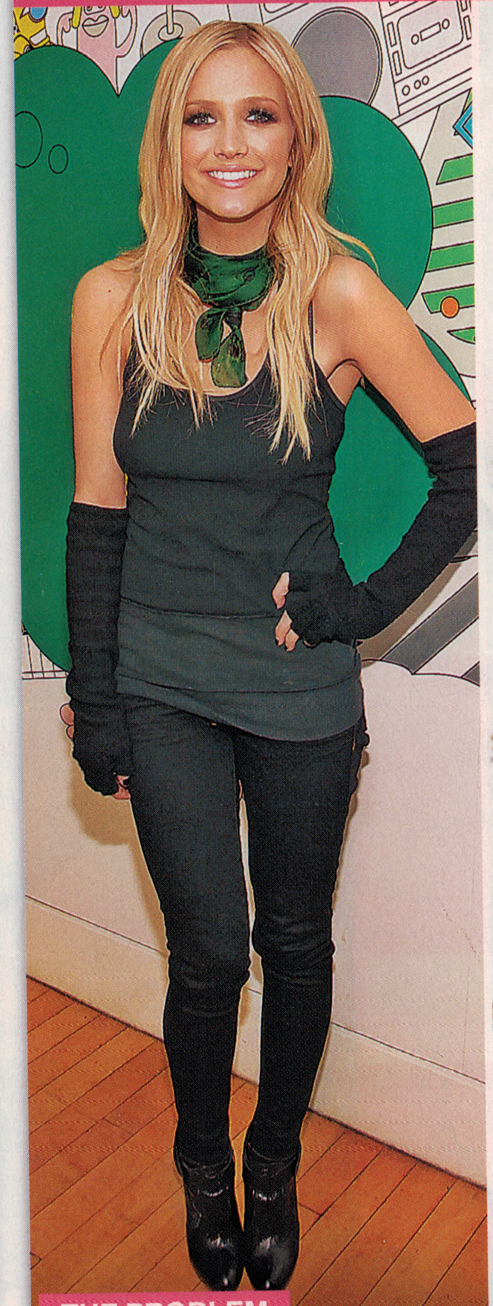
understated extras



THE FIX

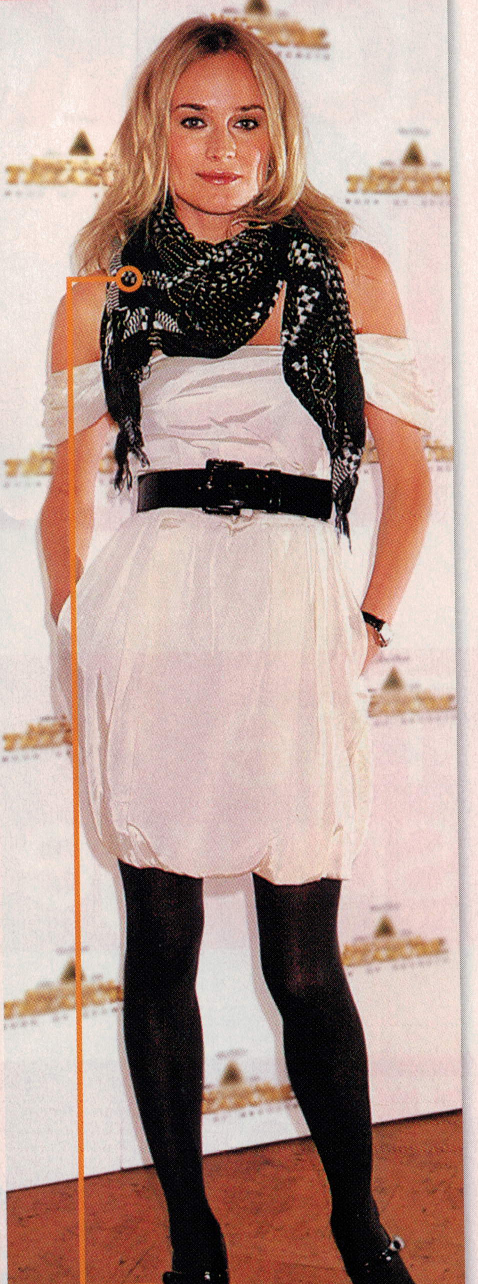
By choosing minimal accessories and a below-the-knee hemline, Molly Sims creates a cleaner, leaner line in this Nanette Lepore top and Rogan skirt. "The key is to keep the bottom half narrow," Delaney says.

Scarves should balance an outfit



THE PROBLEM

"It looks like she's wearing her little dog's scarf," Delaney jokes about Ashlee Simpson's tiny neckerchief. A chunkier knit scarf or an extra-long skinny style would contrast with the super-slim all-black silhouette.



THE FIX

When an outfit hugs the figure — as Diane Kruger's 3.1 Phillip Lim dress does — it needs bulk to balance it. This boho wrap, which Diane bought on the street in London, is perfect. "She's great at mixing proportions," Delaney notes.

DIET OF THE WEEK

America's diet

Forget Ugly Betty! America Ferrera showed off a sexy new shape in a body-hugging Monique Lhuillier lace gown while sashaying down the red carpet at the SAG Awards. "She looked like another person," says an eyewitness at the Jan. 27 event. "She was much thinner and toned. What a transformation."

What's behind the makeover that America's been working on since the new year began? She's stopped eating all the wrong things at all the wrong times for all the wrong reasons, says an insider close to the 23-year-old: "America never ate breakfast," says the insider, "so her energy would lag in the afternoon." Plus, she'd turn to junk food for comfort when she was stressed — an all-too-common problem.

"For many women, food becomes a dietary antidepressant," explains Oz Garcia, a nutritionist and

THEN
Even when America was a bit curvier, in 2005, she loved her body. "She's happy to be a normal size," says an insider. Bravo!

NOW
Toning up before the Jan. 27 SAG Awards earned America plenty of oohs and aahs when she walked the red carpet.

If America goes any more glam, she won't even be able to fake Ugly Betty!

really works

The star spreads out her meals to rev up and slim down author of The Balance. Fast food and sweets can alter moods by increasing serotonin, a feel-good chemical in the brain, says Garcia. But too much nutrition-free fare can deplete the body, leaving you sluggish.

Her wake-up call

Desperate to feel better, America resolved to give her body a healthy jump-start. She began a stress-busting hiking-and-yoga regimen, says the insider, and adopted a healthy-eating plan to stay energized. By eating breakfast and small snacks, she now has fewer cravings for doughnuts and croissants on set.

Her new energy-boosting plan has recently helped the 5-foot-1 star lose about 8 pounds and go down two dress sizes, says the insider. Still, for America, weight loss isn't about impressing on the red carpet. "A perfect body doesn't fix all your problems or make you love yourself more," she's said. "It's all about being comfortable in your own skin."

America Ferrera's protein-packed menu

BREAKFAST
On the go, America eats low-fat yogurt with fruit, says an insider. An egg and whole-grain bread work, too, nutritionist Oz Garcia says.

A.M. SNACK
America curbs hunger pangs with a handful of unsalted raw almonds. Fresh fruit, like oranges or bananas, can also do the trick.

LUNCH
America, says an insider, has ditched pasta for a turkey-breast wrap or Chinese chicken salad (with a side of dressing).

P.M. SNACK
Instead of America's old choice — potato chips — Garcia suggests whole-grain crackers with peanut butter or low-fat cheese.

DINNER
A grilled-chicken fajita or a plate of stir-fried veggies and brown rice is a healthy way for America to enjoy her favorite cuisines.

DESSERT
A small scoop of ice cream tames America's sweet tooth. Also try a piece of antioxidant-rich dark chocolate, suggests Garcia.

Spice up — to shed pounds!

America is a fan of muy caliente Mexican goodies — which could actually help her slim down, says nutritionist Oz Garcia: "There's evidence that spicy food can raise the metabolic rate by up to 50 percent for up to three hours after a meal." Spices like curry, cayenne pepper and chili can also help curb cravings.

Q: How can I go blond without looking totally washed out?

A: "Find a shade that creates a contrast between the skin and hair," advises Kyle White, who colors Mariah Carey's locks at the Oscar Blandi salon in NYC. Sandy tones like Charlize Theron's work for fair faces, while buttery hues warm up olive skin and caramel brightens dark skin.

Q: I want to go red. How can I make it look real?

A: They could. "You can prevent damage by using lowlights instead," explains White, noting that's how Ashley Tisdale got her new caramel and strawberry streaks. Looking curvier!

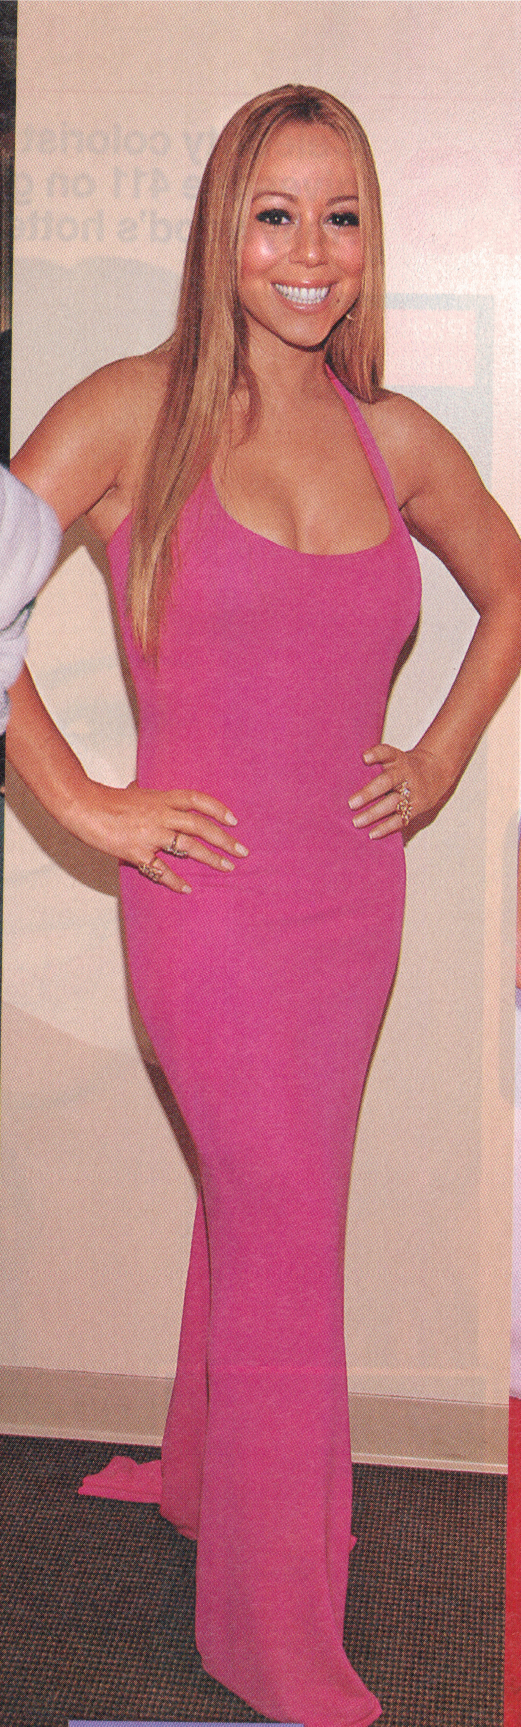
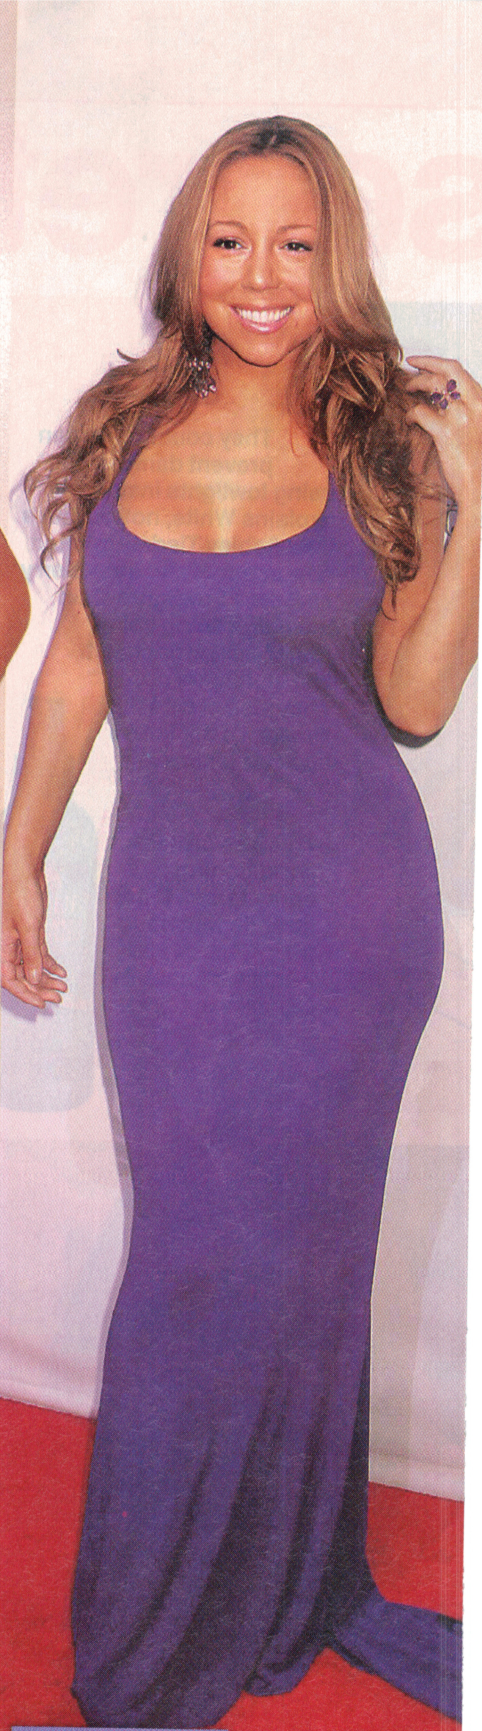
Five-foot-9 Mariah weighed an estimated 160 pounds here at a 2005 New Year's celebration. "Everyone said I was fat," Mariah says.



Streamlined

In July 2006, Mariah rocked a toned 130-pound physique for her Adventures of Mimi tour. Her secret? She called her small-portion meals the "morsel diet."



Less svelte

Mariah was up to about 135 pounds (and looking a lot softer) last September. "Snacking is the hardest habit to change," she's confessed to an insider.

Mariah's SKINNY AGAIN!

Toned to perfection

"With tight abs, toned legs and jacked arms, Mariah looks like she's put in serious time at the gym," Peak Performance trainer Kaitlin Kay says about Mimi's 120-pound bod.

Has Mariah finally put an end to her yo-yo weight issues?

Mariah Carey's album That Chick, out in April, isn't the only project the pop singer has been working on — just take a look at her super-svelte bod! "Mariah's getting in tour shape," an insider confirms to Life & Style about the star, who's lost an estimated 15 pounds. "She's on a healthy diet and has been working out a lot."

But making sure her body is in tip-top shape is nothing new for the 5-foot-9 Mariah, who went through the same slim-down process before her 2006 Adventures of Mimi tour. The difference? This time her success may be permanent.

"Mariah's thrilled with her body, and she's determined to keep it," says a second insider. "She's really trying to make healthy eating a way of life —not just an emergency fix between tours."

Mimi's makeover

Recently, Mariah's been stocking up on lean protein and veggies, but her new regimen has more to do with her mind. "She's learning that a treat or two doesn't mean she's blown everything," says the second insider. "She just stays longer at her next workout."

Sessions with trainer Patricia Gray have become routine. "She swims and does lots of crunches," says the first insider, noting the abs Mimi loves to flaunt. In fact, plastic surgeon Dr. Michael Salzhauer, who doesn't treat the star, says Mariah, 38, looks like she may have helped perfect her taut tummy and thighs with some liposculpting (which her rep denies).

However she got her new look, Mariah's happy with it. "She never wanted to get stick thin," says the second insider. "Now she's found a weight she thinks is perfect."

FLASHBACK!

Fit or faux? In 2003, Mariah's "six-pack" looked like it was the result of strategically placed self-tanner!

Some say there's no such thing as a free lunch — but High School Musical's Corbin Bleu proved them wrong on Jan. 10, when he showed up at West Hollywood Elementary School with a Sara Lee whole-grain meal for all.

Of course, someone had to work for it — and that would be 11-year-old Grace Stagg, who won the Sara Lee Soft & Smooth Bread Ultimate Lunch Switcheroo Contest for her essay on why her school cafeteria needed a lunchtime makeover. The prize included a $5,000 grant to accomplish Grace's wish. (The following day, Corbin visited and gave out lunch at the other winning school, St. Rose of Lima in Chula Vista, Calif.)

"The point was to explain to the kids the importance of eating whole-grain breads," Corbin, 18, tells Life & Style. "I spoke to them about how eating right factors into my career success and how the same thing goes for their schoolwork."

It was a dream come true for contest winner Grace Stagg, who also received a year's supply of Sara Lee Soft & Smooth bread from her idol, Corbin.

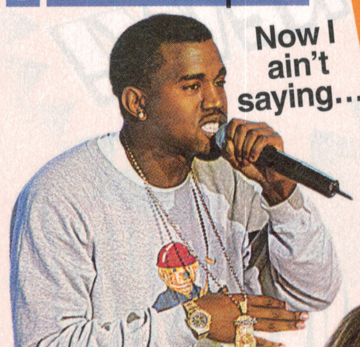
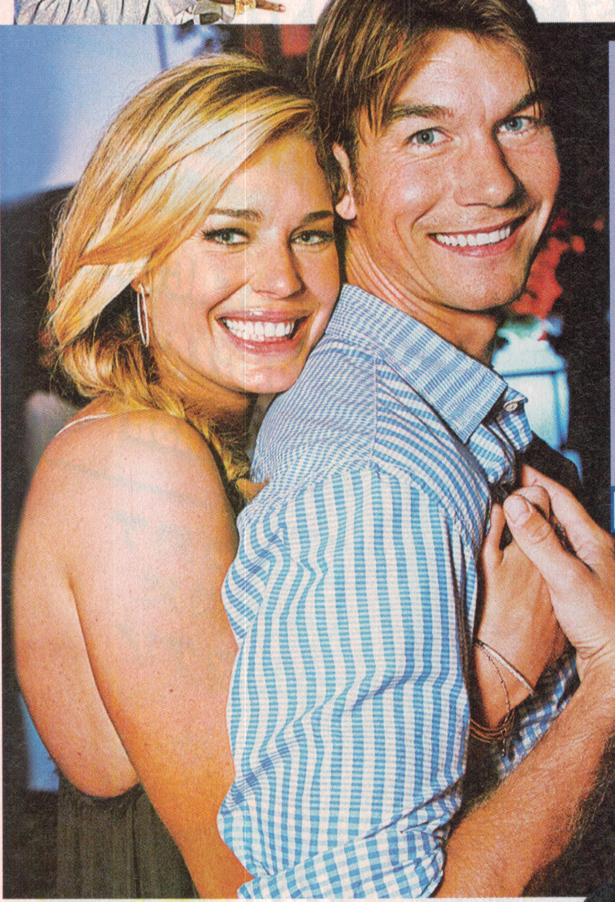
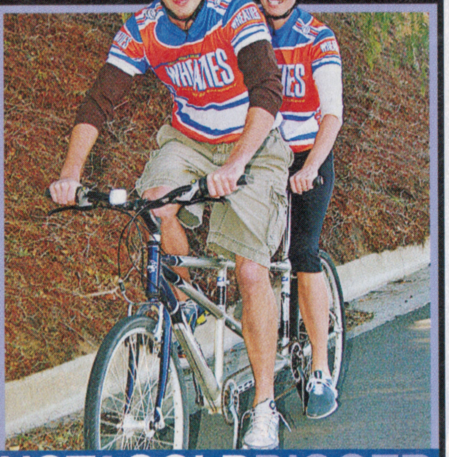
Who's a GOLD
Who's NOT!



When it comes to matters of the heart, some celebs see only green

With millions to lose, Hollywood stars have to be very careful about whom they trust — especially when it comes to falling in love. They not only give their hearts to the one they love, but without the right protection, they could end up giving their fortunes as well. "Even celebrities who live with each other without being married should have an agreement drafted because they can still be sued for palimony," A-list attorney Raoul Felder tells Life & Style. "Stars are targets for money-grubbers."





NOT A GOLD DIGGER

JERRY'S PROTECTING REBECCA'S ASSETS

Jerry O'Connell isn't afraid to admit that he and wife Rebecca Romijn have a prenup. "It's like ironclad for Rebecca," he says. "What am I going to give her, my bicycle? Rebecca's going to get my bicycle, my acid-wash jeans and my Stand by Me video — it's not even a DVD."

GOLD DIGGER

PAM KEPT HIS RING AFTER THEY SPLIT

After their six-month marriage ended last February, Kid Rock asked that Pam Anderson return the $500,000 engagement ring he'd bought her. Realistic request? "I doubt it, but boy, that'd be nice," he said. Pam, though, wasn't feeling so generous.

DIGGER and

GOLDDIGGER

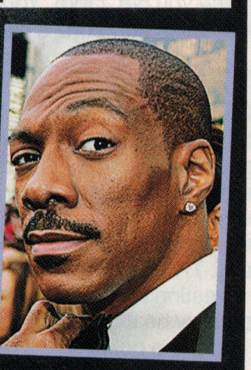
JOE'S BIG PLAN BACKFIRED

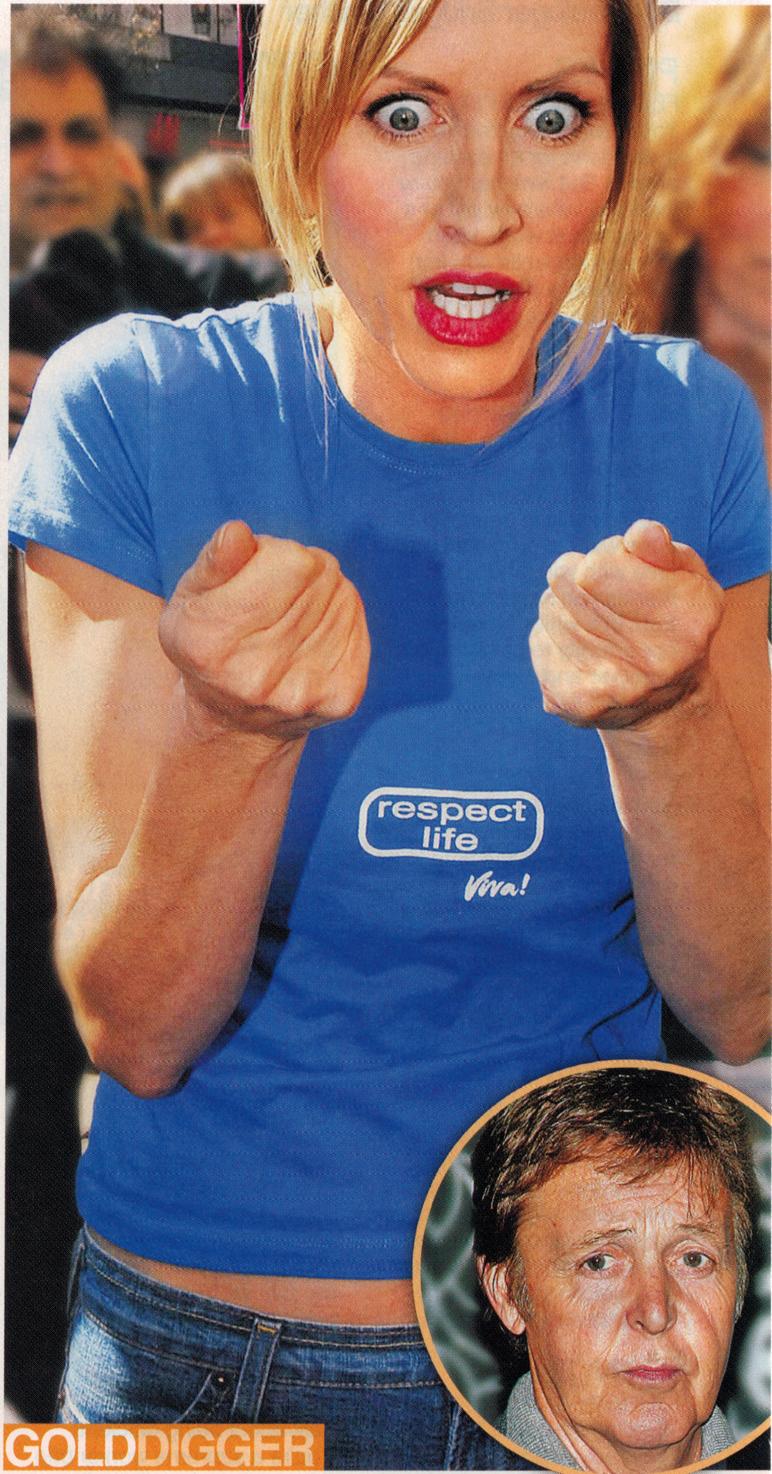
Before Nick Lachey and Jessica Simpson married in 2002, Jessica's dad, Joe, reportedly discouraged Jess from signing a prenup. Why? At the time, Nick was worth more. "That's a calculated gamble," Felder says. Too bad Jess was worth three times as much by the time the couple split.

NOTAGOLDDIGGER

MEL B SAYS SHE WAS IN IT FOR LOVE

After Melanie Brown asked Eddie Murphy for money to support their 11-month-old daughter, Angel, he reportedly accused her of trying to extort him. Mel's reply: "The person I fell in love with was amazing. The person I know now...I'm kind of appalled with."





GOLDDIGGER

HEATHER WANTS A HUGE PAYDAY

Paul McCartney, who's worth $1.5 billion, didn't ask Heather Mills to sign a prenup. Now Paul's former wife of four years is holding out for the big bucks, reportedly turning down Sir Paul's first offer of $100 million. "She should have taken the money and gone away," says Felder.

ARIES
MARCH 20 – APRIL 19

Ready to feel like a celebrity? Good, because just like sign mate Reese Witherspoon, you're totally in demand! Best buds want to spend all their time with you, and so do old friends you haven't heard from in a while. Take this opportunity to get everyone together and enjoy.

TAURUS
APRIL 20 – MAY 20

You're almost too hot to handle! Looking for love or more money? Now's the time to go on that date or apply for your dream job. You (and fellow Taurus Jamie-Lynn Sigler) are golden, embodying everyone's idea of the perfect companion or employee.

Birthday of the week

AQUARIUS
JAN. 20 – FEB. 18

GO FOR YOUR GOALS

Make a good wish this week, because you (and birthday girl Jennifer Aniston) have the power to make it come true! You're willing to take chances that could lead to über-opportunities, so stay focused and don't let others get in your way. This is your chance to stand out in a crowd. Go get 'em!

Jennifer Aniston
Feb. 11, 1969

GEMINI
MAY 21 – JUNE 20

Looks like you have all the answers right now. Smart, timely decisions come easily this week, and friends will turn to you for advice. Just make sure to check things out before you weigh in or make any major changes of your own.

CANCER
JUNE 21 – JULY 22

Feeling impatient? Use it to your advantage. You're able to achieve real results this week, but don't be too pushy — some might misinterpret your persistence. If you hit a wall, don't get frustrated. Just take matters into your own hands and go for it!

LEO
JULY 23 – AUG. 22

Your to-do list is huge, but luckily you (and sign mate Kate Beckinsale) have tons of support from helpful pals and colleagues. If you prioritize your tasks, you'll be super productive. Then when opportunity knocks, you can answer!

VIRGO
AUG. 23 – SEPT. 22

Talk about being efficient! You're a supreme worker bee this week and you'll finally finish those chores that have been hanging over your head. Take some time to treat yourself to a quick getaway or a catch-up session with good friends. You've earned it!

LIBRA
SEPT. 23 – OCT. 23

Romance is in the air. Say yes to invites and spontaneous nights out with friends — they could lead to something bigger. Go out there with confidence and mingle every chance you get, Libra. You just might catch someone's eye!

SCORPIO
OCT. 24 – NOV. 22

It's time to crack open that piggy bank, Scorpio. There are great opportunities lurking everywhere, so keep your eyes and mind open to new ideas. Thinking about moving or investing in some stocks? Now may be the perfect time to go for the gold.

SAGITTARIUS
NOV. 23 – DEC. 20

Relax. You don't have to do everything on your own. It's okay to ask for help sometimes. Give yourself a break and let others lend a hand this week. You'll be excited to see just how much you can accomplish with a little teamwork.

CAPRICORN
DEC. 21 – JAN. 19

It's all about networking now! Casual, unexpected chats can generate career-building opportunities. Get noticed by dazzling everyone you meet with your brilliant ideas — a brief encounter may land you the promotion you've been hoping for!

THE HOTTIE AND THE NOTTIE

Paris may be hot, but her new movie's not

A dork in love with a hottie (Paris Hilton) tries to win over her hideously ugly best friend, a "nottie." Shockingly tasteless — and worse, humorless — this misogynistic mess feels like it was written by horny 12-year-old boys. We love you, Paris, but this movie's a total nottie. ⯪☆☆☆

IN BRUGES

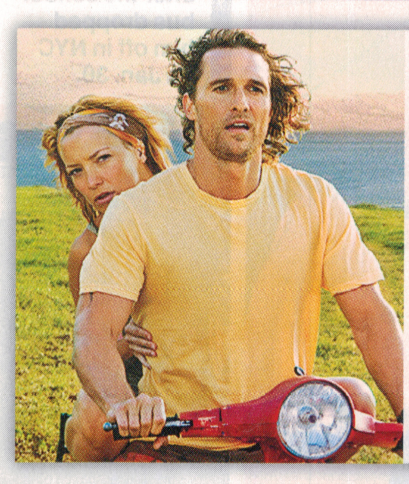
Go see it — even if you can't pronounce it

Two hit men, Ray (Colin Farrell) and Ken (Brendan Gleeson), are ordered by their boss (Ralph Fiennes) to cool their heels in the quaint city of Bruges (pronounced "Broozh"), Belgium. Ken soaks up the culture, while Ray, haunted by a killing gone wrong, starts to lose it. This very funny (and very violent) comic thriller about guilt and redemption is the first great movie of 2008. ★★★⯪

WELCOME HOME ROSCOE JENKINS

A raucous and sometimes riotous crowd-pleaser

An LA talk-show host (Martin Lawrence) brings his reality-TV-star fiancée (Joy Bryant) to a family reunion — where he finds himself falling for his old crush and fighting with an old rival. It's predictable — but often hilarious. ★★⯪☆



FOOL'S GOLD

Seriously, some unserious fun

You loved them in 2003's How to Lose a Guy in 10 Days. Now Kate Hudson and mostly shirtless Matthew McConaughey appear to be having fun as very recent divorcees hunting for sunken treasure. Can they beat the baddies to the booty? Will Kate realize Matt was the guy for her all along? The answer is predictable but still worth the ride. — Lew Harris ★★☆☆

THE SALT-N-PEPA SHOW

The dynamic duo "Shoops" and scores

Superstar girl rap group Salt-N-Pepa reconciled after a bad breakup in 2002, but can their friendship survive party planning? As season one of this reality show resumes following a two-month break, Cheryl "Salt" James enlists Sandy "Pepa" Denton to help her 16-year-old daughter plan a coed shindig. As expected, Pepa quickly pushes Salt to the brink with her lavish, provocative ideas. The odd couple's entertaining squabbles have us wondering how long this reunion will last — so enjoy every minute it does! —K.A. Mon., Feb. 11, 10 p.m., VH1 ★★★☆

SNEAK PEEK

KNIGHT RIDER

Rev your engines for this TV-movie remake

The original star, David Hasselhoff, makes a cameo in this sequel of sorts to the '80s TV series. But everything else is different: A new KITT — a Ford Mustang, not a Trans Am — sets out to save its inventor from bad guys, with help from our new hero, ex–Army Ranger Mike Tracer (All My Children's Justin Bruening). Vroom! Sun., Feb. 17, 9 p.m., NBC

JERICHO

TV's most suspenseful drama returns

After a nuclear explosion, the town of Jericho struggled to survive — and its battle with a neighboring town at the end of season one made life even more difficult. The action-packed season-two premiere picks up with the citizens of Jericho (including stars Ashley Scott and Skeet Ulrich) trying to protect themselves and deal with the government agency supposedly there to help them. —B.K.S. Tue., Feb. 12, 10 p.m., CBS ★★★☆

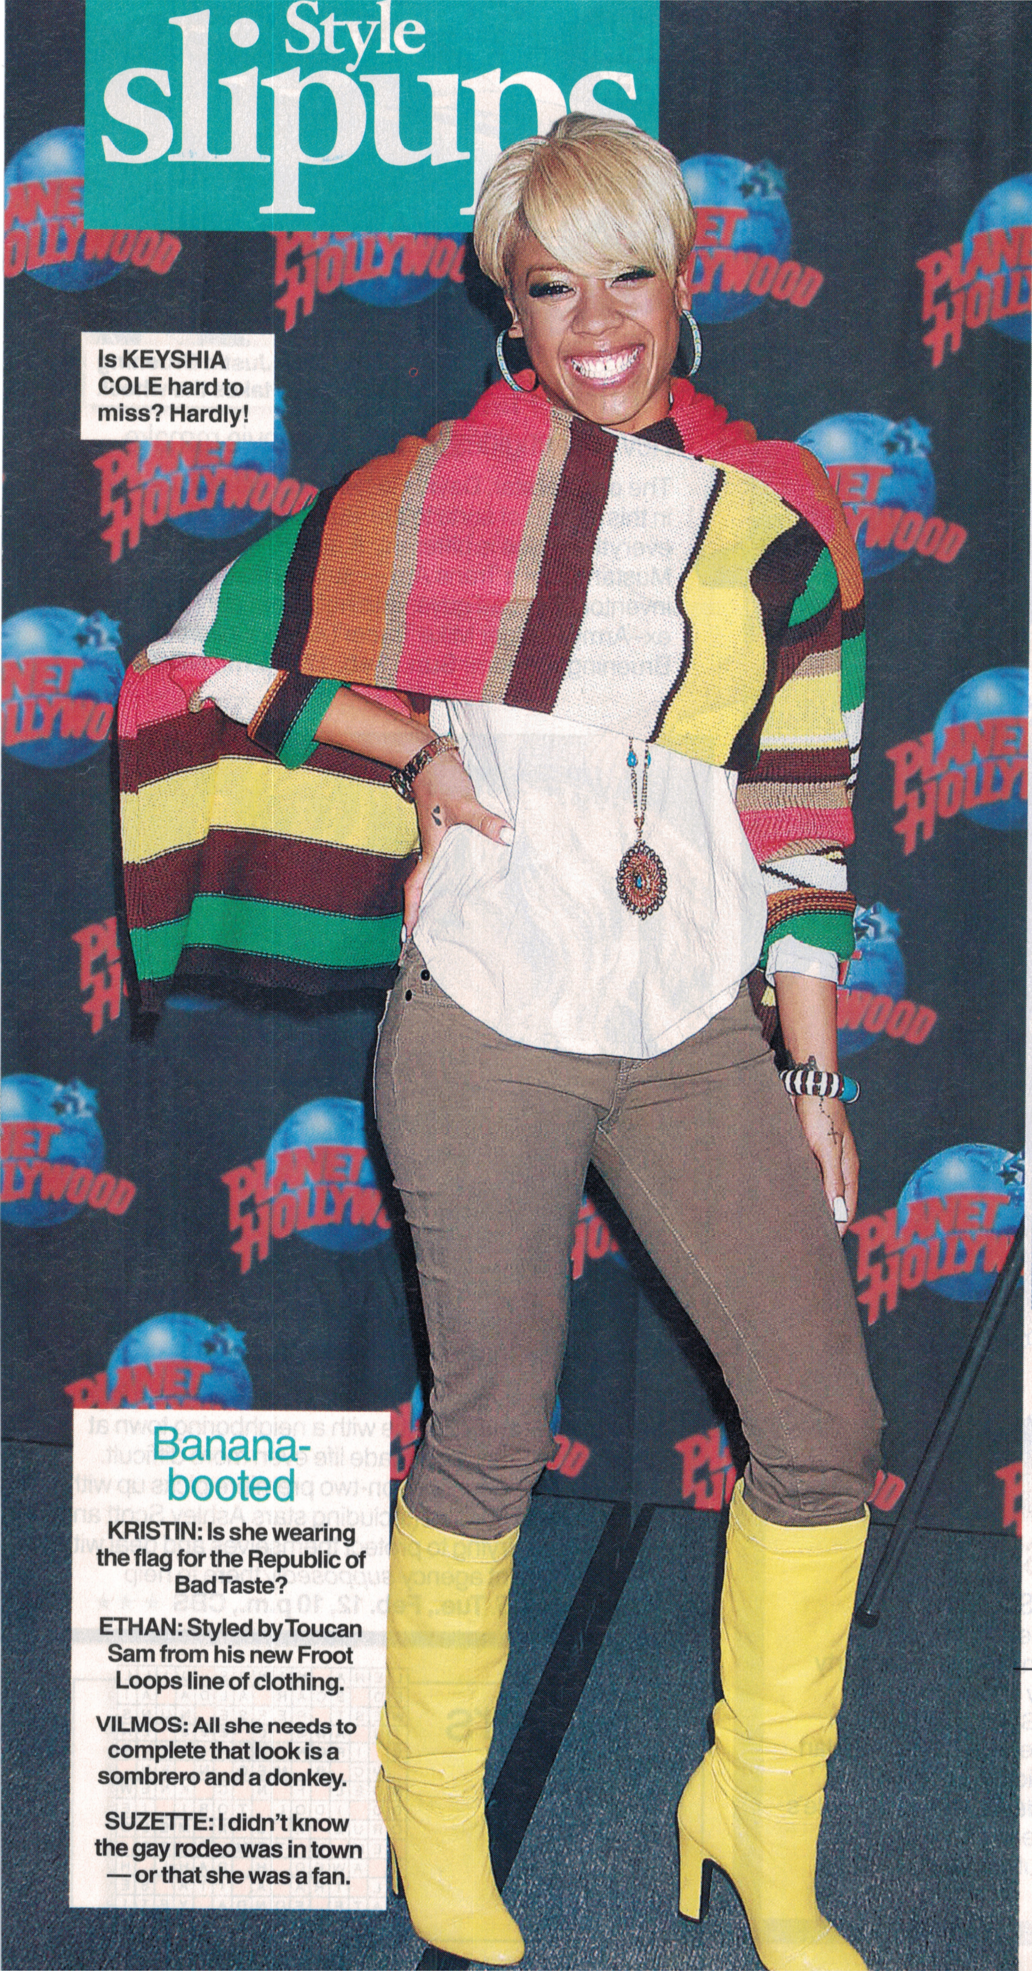
Style slipups



Is KEYSHIA COLE hard to miss? Hardly!

Banana-booted

KRISTIN: Is she wearing the flag for the Republic of Bad Taste?

ETHAN: Styled by Toucan Sam from his new Froot Loops line of clothing.

VILMOS: All she needs to complete that look is a sombrero and a donkey.

SUZETTE: I didn't know the gay rodeo was in town — or that she was a fan.

Bathrobe chic

BRIAN: They say life is tough outside The OC, but this is ridiculous.

JOSH: At least she won't get damaged if she gets put in the back of a moving truck.

NICK: Rachel, you can be friends with the Olsen twins without having to look like one.

KRISTIN: Somewhere out there a yard gnome is missing his hat.

Bad luck of the Irish

DANIELLE: What part of this look made him go, "Dress shoes, definitely go with the dress shoes."

ILMOS: Is he coming from the set of Elf 2?

SUZETTE: Looks like someone dressed himself after too many Guinnesses.

MIKE: Will likes to call this look "Bend it like Ricky Bobby."

Keepin' a low profile

ETHAN: Hey, Meg, the grunge era of the '90s called — they'd like their stuff back.

BOB: Looks like someone's girdle is pinching her a little too tight.

SHELAGH: Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman, arrives on the slopes ready to party.

DANIELLE: Unless she's starring in You've Got Snow, there's no excuse.

Seeing spots

SHELAGH: Does that dress come with a bottle of Dramamine?

MICAH: If she's trying to make backgammon seem chic, she's failing.

CAROLYN: Thanks to that dress, Kat's moving in all the wrong circles.

THEO: What's black and white and should never be worn again? You guessed it!
